COURSE DESCRIPTION

In Part 2 of this series, participants will learn about a teaching process called Guided Participation, which uses co-regulation to create authentic partnerships between the teacher and student, therapist and client, or caregiver and child (of any age!). When practicing co-regulation, the guide thoughtfully crafts competent, contingent roles for their student in an ongoing way, and responsibility is transferred over time, at a pace that is manageable for each learner. This leads to positive social connection, true reciprocity, and increased opportunities for engagement, growth, and continued learning.

LEARNER OBJECTIVES:

1. Participants will be able to describe why it's important to teach at a child's edge of competence, and how this teaching style supports kids to stay regulated and engaged.
2. Participants will be able to explain co-regulation in terms of competent, authentic, contingent roles.
3. Participants will be able to describe the language and pacing used within co-regulatory opportunities
