ADHD for All: Classroom Strategies for All Learners

On Demand Course

Presenter: Jillian Meinhardt, LCSW, LICSW, LCSW-C

COURSE OVERVIEW

This one-hour course will provide participants with a comprehensive understanding of the ADHD diagnosis and its prevalence across different populations. Participants will be able to identify how ADHD presents physically, academically, socially and emotionally. In addition, participants will leave with specific strategies to support ADHD learners in the classroom, including proximity tactics, sensory items and movement needs. In 2022, The National Center for Education Statistics reported more than two-thirds of students served under IDEA spent 80 percent or more time in general education classrooms. Participants will understand the benefits of implementing strategies for ADHD learners in every classroom. Powerpoint, lecture and case examples will be used as teaching strategies during the course.

LEARNER OBJECTIVES

1. Identify four criteria for the ADHD diagnosis
2. Provide two benefits of understanding prevalence rates for ADHD diagnoses
3. Identify physical, academic, social and emotional traits of ADHD
4. Identify two strategies for ADHD learners in each category: physical, academic, social and emotional
5. Describe three benefits of implementing the above strategies in classrooms for every learner

INTENDED AUDIENCE

This Introductory level course is intended for anyone working with a child or student diagnosed with ADHD (educators, administrators, mental health providers, support staff, parents, camp counselors, camp administrators, religious school educators, etc.). No prerequisites required.
